

BEHAVIOUR MANAGEMENT POLICY

Colston Bassett School positively seeks to establish a safe, secure and happy environment which stimulates the learning of every pupil with the encouragement of staff and the support of parents. Good behaviour is a necessary condition for effective teaching and learning to take place, and an important outcome of education which society rightly expects. All citizens in schools or in the wider community need to understand and accept boundaries of acceptable behaviour and the associated patterns of rewards and sanctions.

The Behaviour Management Policy has two aims:

- The positive encouragement of good behaviour;
- The management and minimisation of unproductive or disruptive behaviour which may undermine the school's ethos.

Staff will actively enforce 'Our School Rules' in their day to day interactions with pupils and will be supported by the Headteacher. The School Rules are displayed in each classroom. There will be, therefore, always a consistent response to any attempt to deviate from or undermine the system.

In the classroom, the teacher will create a sense of purpose, which is focused on the curriculum content and its delivery. Our overall aim is to maintain good order within the school, so that the staff and pupils feel comfortable and secure and are able to carry out their teaching and learning activities to the best of their abilities. The key to achieving this is in the quality of relationships within the school – both professional relationships between teachers and the ways in which pupils and teachers treat each other. Where teachers treat pupils courteously, respect their ideas, value their individuality, and listen carefully to what they have to say, pupils learn by example and are much more likely to respect teachers and to behave sensibly and considerately themselves.

At the beginning of each academic year this policy will be explained to all the children. 'Our School Rules' will be endorsed in PSHE lessons and assemblies.

OUR SCHOOL RULES

- Be polite.
- Be tidy.
- Be helpful.
- Take care of things.
- Be well organised.
- Running in school is not allowed.
- Move around quietly.
- Be safe.
- Respect everyone.

POSITIVE BEHAVIOUR

Promoting good behaviour is particularly important with very young children; applying rules consistently and respecting individual children's levels of understanding are vital parts of behaviour management. Young children learn much by the example set by adults around them; the behaviour of everyone who works with children must be such as to promote trust in their relationship with children and to provide a positive role model. Positive reinforcement of behaviour should be specific and immediate; straightforward praise, giving positive instructions, distraction and redirection may all contribute to this.

REWARDS

Pupils are likely to achieve more, to be better motivated and to behave better, when teachers commend and reward their successes and emphasise their potential. Highlighting pupils' weaknesses and shortcomings can be detrimental. Praise can be delivered in formal and informal ways, by giving happy faces, commendations or just saying "well done"; it can be awarded to individuals or groups for the steady maintenance of good standards as well as for particular achievements of note.

A child may be nominated by a member of staff to receive a Headteacher's Award for hard work or helpful behaviour within the school. There are also two weekly trophies ('Star of the Week' for Reception/Key Stage 1 and the 'Merit Award' for Key Stage 2) awarded each Friday to children who have made a special effort or improvement that week.

Children can also be awarded house points for helpful behaviour, effort and good work. This is to encourage them to work together within a team to win the House Cup which will be presented at the end of each term.

SANCTIONS

The ways of dealing with unacceptable behaviour must be used consistently by all staff. These may include:

- Giving a verbal reprimand, quiet and personalised;
- Giving a warning of the consequences;
- Removing the child from the situation;
- Removing privileges;
- Ignoring recognised attention-seeking behaviour;
- If necessary, a child's behaviour will be discussed with parents.

BULLYING

We acknowledge that bullying could occur at Colston Bassett School. This would be totally unacceptable and taken very seriously. The school has a detailed Anti-Bullying and Harrassment Policy which outlines our approach to dealing with potential cases of bullying.

PHYSICAL RESTRAINT

The school maintains the right to physically restrain a pupil (in accordance with official guidance) if the child is deemed a threat to their own or others' safety (see Appendix 1 - DfE 'Use of Reasonable Force').

MONITORING

Pupil behaviour will be discussed regularly at staff meetings; if this policy is effective, there should be no deterioration in the general behaviour of the pupils. Changing patterns in behaviour will be monitored in this way and consideration given to any necessary modifications of this policy.

The Headteacher, Mrs Ruth O'Dell, is the Behaviour Management Co-ordinator for Colston Bassett School.

Department for Education

Use of reasonable force

Advice for headteachers, staff and governing bodies

July 2013

Summary

About this departmental advice

This is non-statutory advice from the Department for Education. It is intended to provide clarification on the use of force to help school staff feel more confident about using this power when they feel it is necessary and to make clear the responsibilities of headteachers and governing bodies in respect of this power.

Expiry or review date

This advice will be kept under review and updated as necessary.

Who is this advice for?

- School leaders and school staff in all schools¹ in England.

Key points

- School staff have a power to use force and lawful use of the power will provide a defence to any related criminal prosecution or other legal action.
- Suspension should not be an automatic response when a member of staff has been accused of using excessive force.
- Senior school leaders should support their staff when they use this power.

¹ "All schools" include Academies, Free Schools, independent schools and all types of maintained schools

What is reasonable force?

1. The term 'reasonable force' covers the broad range of actions used by most teachers at some point in their career that involve a degree of physical contact with pupils.
2. Force is usually used either to control or restrain. This can range from guiding a pupil to safety by the arm through to more extreme circumstances such as breaking up a fight or where a student needs to be restrained to prevent violence or injury.
3. 'Reasonable in the circumstances' means using no more force than is needed.
4. As mentioned above, schools generally use force to control pupils and to restrain them. Control means either passive physical contact, such as standing between pupils or blocking a pupil's path, or active physical contact such as leading a pupil by the arm out of a classroom.
5. Restraint means to hold back physically or to bring a pupil under control. It is typically used in more extreme circumstances, for example when two pupils are fighting and refuse to separate without physical intervention.
6. School staff should always try to avoid acting in a way that might cause injury, but in extreme cases it may not always be possible to avoid injuring the pupil.

Who can use reasonable force?

- All members of school staff have a legal power to use reasonable force².
- This power applies to any member of staff at the school. It can also apply to people whom the headteacher has temporarily put in charge of pupils such as unpaid volunteers or parents accompanying students on a school organised visit.

When can reasonable force be used?

- Reasonable force can be used to prevent pupils from hurting themselves or others, from damaging property, or from causing disorder.
- In a school, force is used for two main purposes – to control pupils or to restrain them.
- The decision on whether or not to physically intervene is down to the professional judgement of the staff member concerned and should always depend on the individual circumstances.

² Section 93, Education and Inspections Act 2006

- The following list is not exhaustive but provides some examples of situations where reasonable force can and cannot be used.

Schools can use reasonable force to:

- remove disruptive children from the classroom where they have refused to follow an instruction to do so;
- prevent a pupil behaving in a way that disrupts a school event or a school trip or visit;
- prevent a pupil leaving the classroom where allowing the pupil to leave would risk their safety or lead to behaviour that disrupts the behaviour of others;
- prevent a pupil from attacking a member of staff or another pupil, or to stop a fight in the playground; and
- restrain a pupil at risk of harming themselves through physical outbursts.

Schools cannot:

- use force as a punishment – it is always unlawful to use force as a punishment.

Power to search pupils without consent

In addition to the general power to use reasonable force described above, headteachers and authorised staff can use such force as is reasonable given the circumstances to conduct a search for the following “prohibited items”³:

- knives and weapons
- alcohol
- illegal drugs
- stolen items
- tobacco and cigarette papers
- fireworks
- pornographic images
- any article that has been or is likely to be used to commit an offence, cause personal injury or damage to property.

Force cannot be used to search for items banned under the school rules.

³ Section 550ZB(5) of the Education Act 1996

Separate guidance is available on the power to search without consent – see the ‘Further sources of information’ section for a link to this document.

Communicating the school’s approach to the use of force

- Every school is required to have a behaviour policy and to make this policy known to staff, parents and pupils. The governing body should notify the headteacher that it expects the school behaviour policy to include the power to use reasonable force.
- There is no requirement to have a policy on the use of force but it is good practice to set out, in the behaviour policy, the circumstances in which force might be used. For example, it could say that teachers will physically separate pupils found fighting or that if a pupil refuses to leave a room when instructed to do so, they will be physically removed.
- Any policy on the use of reasonable force should acknowledge their legal duty to make reasonable adjustments for disabled children and children with special educational needs (SEN).
- Schools do not require parental consent to use force on a student.
- Schools should not have a ‘no contact’ policy. There is a real risk that such a policy might place a member of staff in breach of their duty of care towards a pupil, or prevent them taking action needed to prevent a pupil causing harm.
- By taking steps to ensure that staff, pupils and parents are clear about when force might be used, the school will reduce the likelihood of complaints being made when force has been used properly.

Using force

- A panel of experts⁴ identified that certain restraint techniques presented an unacceptable risk when used on children and young people. The techniques in question are:
- the ‘seated double embrace’ which involves two members of staff forcing a person into a sitting position and leaning them forward, while a third monitors breathing;
- the ‘double basket-hold’ which involves holding a person’s arms across their chest; and
- the ‘nose distraction technique’ which involves a sharp upward jab under the nose.

⁴ Physical Control in Care Medical Panel - 2008

Staff training

- Schools need to take their own decisions about staff training. The headteacher should consider whether members of staff require any additional training to enable them to carry out their responsibilities and should consider the needs of the pupils when doing so.
- Some local authorities provide advice and guidance to help schools to develop an appropriate training programme.

Telling parents when force has been used on their child

- It is good practice for schools to speak to parents about serious incidents involving the use of force and to consider how best to record such serious incidents. It is up to schools to decide whether it is appropriate to report the use of force to parents⁵.
- In deciding what is a serious incident, teachers should use their professional judgement and consider the:
 - pupil's behaviour and level of risk presented at the time of the incident;
 - degree of force used;
 - effect on the pupil or member of staff; and
 - the child's age.

What happens if a pupil complains when force is used on them?

- All complaints about the use of force should be thoroughly, speedily and appropriately investigated.
- Where a member of staff has acted within the law – that is, they have used reasonable force in order to prevent injury, damage to property or disorder – this will provide a defence to any criminal prosecution or other civil or public law action.
- When a complaint is made the onus is on the person making the complaint to prove that his/her allegations are true – it is not for the member of staff to show that he/she has acted reasonably.
- Suspension must not be an automatic response when a member of staff has been accused of using excessive force. Schools should refer to the “Dealing with Allegations of Abuse against Teachers and Other Staff” guidance (see the ‘Further sources of information’ section below) where an allegation of using excessive force is made against a teacher. This guidance makes clear that a person must not be suspended automatically, or without careful thought.

⁵ References to parent or parents are to fathers as well as mothers, unless otherwise stated.

- Schools must consider carefully whether the circumstances of the case warrant a person being suspended until the allegation is resolved or whether alternative arrangements are more appropriate.
- If a decision is taken to suspend a teacher, the school should ensure that the teacher has access to a named contact who can provide support.
- Governing bodies should always consider whether a teacher has acted within the law when reaching a decision on whether or not to take disciplinary action against the teacher.
- As employers, schools and local authorities have a duty of care towards their employees. It is important that schools provide appropriate pastoral care to any member of staff who is subject to a formal allegation following a use of force incident.

What about other physical contact with pupils?

- It is not illegal to touch a pupil. There are occasions when physical contact, other than reasonable force, with a pupil is proper and necessary.
- Examples of where touching a pupil might be proper or necessary:
 - Holding the hand of the child at the front/back of the line when going to assembly or when walking together around the school;
 - When comforting a distressed pupil;
 - When a pupil is being congratulated or praised;
 - To demonstrate how to use a musical instrument;
 - To demonstrate exercises or techniques during PE lessons or sports coaching; and
 - To give first aid.

Frequently Asked Questions

Q: I'm worried that if I use force a pupil or parent could make a complaint against me. Am I protected?

A: Yes, if you have acted lawfully. If the force used is reasonable all staff will have a robust defence against any accusations.

Q: How do I know whether using a physical intervention is 'reasonable'?

A: The decision on whether to physically intervene is down to the professional judgement of the teacher concerned. Whether the force used is reasonable will always depend on the particular circumstances of the case. The use of force is reasonable if it is proportionate to the consequences it is intended to prevent. This means the degree of force used should be no more than is needed to achieve the desired result. School staff should expect the full backing of their senior leadership team when they have used force.

Q: What about school trips?

A: The power may be used where the member of staff is lawfully in charge of the pupils, and this includes while on school trips.

Q: Can force be used on pupils with SEN or disabilities?

A: Yes, but the judgement on whether to use force should not only depend on the circumstances of the case but also on information and understanding of the needs of the pupil concerned.

Q: I'm a female teacher with a Year 10 class - there's no way I'd want to restrain or try to control my pupils. Am I expected to do so?

A: There is a power, not a duty, to use force so members of staff have discretion whether or not to use it. However, teachers and other school staff have a duty of care towards their pupils and it might be argued that failing to take action (including a failure to use reasonable force) may in some circumstances breach that duty.

Q: Are there any circumstances in which a teacher can use physical force to punish a pupil?

A: No. It is always unlawful to use force as a punishment. This is because it would fall within the definition of corporal punishment, which is illegal.
